

As a schoolteacher, my biggest complaint is the inability to get students to remain objective. When an important media outlet like Sinclair Broadcasting is incapable of doing so, it makes the job that much more problematic. If powerful corporations are not being held accountable, why should the youth of America?

Unless I'm grossly mistaken, there is no charge to Sinclair to broadcast on public airwaves. Aren't they bound to serve the public interest? I'm unclear how their airing of this "Stolen Honor" program does this. Is it objective? Is it balanced?

Rules on media ownership need to be enforced. Please send the message to my students that our government is serving the best interests of all people. Thank you.
